Illinois Highway Department Hears Many Views on the Routing of Route 51

One of the hottest contested road routings in the state of Illinois was held in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago Thursday afternoon of this week, when the state highway department consisting of Col. C. R. Miller, Frank T. Sheets, Mr. Lamb and several other officials heard various groups regarding the routing of Route 51.

This route was originally proposed under the one hundred million dollar issue to start on route 44 at Andres and continue north thru Green Garden, Frankfort, Orland and Palos on to Justice. Preliminary surveys were made of this route.

Fully 500 persons attended the hearing. The proponents of Wolf Road as route 51 were in the majority and had the most speakers, all of whom showed that Wolf Road would relieve the traffic congestion on Keane Avenue and other Cook County highways and would also reach more communities and benefit more people than any other route.

Frankfort had a delegation present and they showed that the route 51 as originally proposed was the shortest route and less hazardous as regards grade crossings of railroads. All the proponents of the original routing of route 51 were unanimous on one point, namely that as the route was named in the law together with the towns thru which it is to run, therefore it should be built as per the preliminary survey.

Wolf Road as Route 51 Possibilities
Mr. Kennedy, of the Frederick Bartlett Realty Company of Chicago was the first speaker. Mr. Kennedy graphically pointed out that his firm owns 1000 acres of land at Alpine, the little town on the Wabash that "Gold forgot" and that this community has been wallowing in the mud for over 20 years. He showed that his firm was ready to subdivide this land and build a hard road built thru that section and that within a short time a village or city of 5,000 population would arise. The Wabash railroad has agreed to put on a suburban service if this section is developed. Mr. Kennedy showed what a big factor Wolf Road if made route 51 would be in building up this section and what a big increase there would be in property values.

Homer Township Wants Wolf Road
Steve Nemeth, well known farmer and stock man of Homer township, was also a speaker favoring Wolf Road as route 51. He plainly outlined how the farmers of that section would be benefited by this highway as it would give them a means of getting their grain, produce and stock to market without pulling thru mud roads. He also pointed out that if route 51 is built according to the preliminary survey it would mean the tearing up or abandoning of a good stone road between Frankfort and Orland on which much money has already been spent.

Andres was also represented, altho not interested in the controversy of the routing of route 51. Attorney John Savage of Joliet represented the Andres interests, and showed that the people there are not concerned which way route 51 does go after leaving Andres, but are interested in getting their community out of the mud. He also brought out points showing how much the farmers of that section would be benefited by a concrete road. Over 600,000 bushels of grain are handled at Andres annually he said.

Chas. Doctor, supervisor of the town of Orland was a staunch supporter of Wolf Road as route 51. He said he was born on Wolf Rd. 62 years ago and has not had anything else but mud roads to travel on in all that time. He showed how Wolf Road can be made one of the main highway arteries of the state of Illinois as it taps all the main highways leading into Chicago and would take care of an immense amount of traffic, thus relieving the congestion so prevalent now on Cook county highways.

$75,000 Ready for Orland Lake

Dr. W. R. Schussler, mayor of Orland and president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce also spoke, but it was apparent that he was trying to carry water on both shoulders as he advocated that route 51 be built thru Frankfort north to Orland and on to Justice and also advocated a hard road for Mokena. In his address one was led to infer that the views he was expressing were those of the organization he represents and he was sharply called to task for this by Edward Cowan, vice president of Palos Park for the afternoon mentioned and declared the views as expressed by Dr. Schussler were the latter's private views and not those of the members of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce and that he was only representing himself and not the organization at the hearing.

Dr. Schussler took a shot at the Will County Board of supervisors when he referred to hard road bond issues by saying it was due to the laxity of the Will County Board that this county has not got a hard road program like Cook county and urged the Will county board to get busy.

Been In Mud For 62 Years

Mr. Cowan represented Palos as a very ardent booster for Wolf Road as route 51. He showed how this route would open thousands of acres of forest preserves land now growing up in weeds and Canada thistles because there is no hard road going thru. He showed how serious the traffic congestion on Keane Avenue now is. He pointed out that a number of concrete roads connect up with Keane Ave., but end there. Traffic from these roads all converges on Keane thus causing the congestion. Last year over seven million people visited the Palos Park forest preserves and this shows plainly why Palos needs another outlet only attainable by making Wolf Road route 51. Mr. Cowan declared Mr. Cowan also showed that Cook County is ready to spend $75,000 to convert 275 acres of land into an artificial lake in the forest preserves in Orland township. He pointed out this is another reason for Wolf Road as only one road cannot handle all the traffic that is certain to come. If Wolf Road would be opened Mr. Cowan pointed out that land representing a value of $100,000 now lying idle and useless would then become of use and for the good of the public. Supervisor Lucas of Palos made a dramatic appeal for Wolf Road and said "for God's sake get us out of the mud".

Desplaines, Wheeling and other towns along the Wolf Road to the north were represented. The Amalgamated Chambers of Commerce with a membership of 40,000 were also represented at the hearing and favored Wolf Road as route 51.

The local speakers for Mokena were Don C. Hall, Sr., of the Don C. Hall Company and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, associate editor of The News-Bulletin. Mr. Hall painted a vivid word picture of the Wolf Road as the main and vital artery of Illinois highway system as it connects with all the main highways from Cario on the south way up into Wisconsin on the north. He paid special tribute to the Illinois Highway Department for their work in building a net work of ribbons of concrete all over the state so as to connect up all the various communities and said that in course of time this great state of ours will lead as the ranking state as regards the construction of hard roads. Mr. Hall also made a dramatic appeal for routing the route known as route 51 over the Wolf Road and in closing his remarks said that he would rather labor for the unattainable heights and be right than to follow the line of least resistance and be in the wrong.

Mrs. Semmler spoke in behalf of the women of Mokena and adjacent communities in favor of Wolf Road as route 51. The high lights in her address were: That Wolf Road if designated as route 51 would serve as an outer belt line to Chicago, thus benefitting numberless constituents of the state; she spoke of the local benefits of Wolf Road as affording Mokena an inlet and an outlet, also showing the community has no hard road and is two miles from one. She further pointed out that Wolf Road would be a big factor in the upbuilding of the community by inducing new residents to locate here which in turn would bring more business to the village and would also give local residents an opportunity to have easy access to Chicago and Joliet for business and recreational purposes. She also stressed the point of how Wolf Road would open up many thousands of acres of nature's wonderland, the forest preserves at Palos Park not now accessible due to lack of hard roads. One of the main points brought out was the interest of motorists in Wolf Road and especially of the appeal it would hold for women motorists for the reason that this highway would pass thru no congested areas.

Would Eliminate Grade Crossings

Frankfort was represented by Attorney Wm. Murphy of Joliet whose argument was that Route 51 having been designated in the law should be constructed as first proposed and that this route had only one grade crossing and was less hazardous than any other route.

Supervisor Wm. Lankenan of Frankfort also spoke along similar lines. Attorney Folkers of Frankfort represented Green Garden interests and favored route 51 as originally proposed. John Kline of Orland spoke in behalf of Commissioner Wm. Beasley of Orland township favoring route 51 coming on Keane Avenue. Peter W. Heintz of the Blue Island Motor Club also spoke in favor of route 51 on Keane Avenue as proposed under the law, contending that this routing would help Blue Island and it would take away much of the now traffic congestion on the Dixie highway which he said is the most traveled highway in the world to day.

The hearing as notable for the great interest aroused in the location of route 51 and the volume of oratory it called forth. At the end of the hearing Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets said that the Highway Department would take the matter of locating route 51 under advisement. It will probably be several weeks before the definite decision is announced.

About 100 people from Mokena attended the hearing. The Rock Island railroad stopped the east bound fast train due here at 11:41 and provided a special coach for the Mokena delegation.

Oak Lawn and Tinley to Vote on Band Proposal

Voters of Tinley Park and Oak Lawn are to pass on a municipal band proposal at the election in April. This is assured by the filing of a petition at the office of the village clerk, calling for the submission of the question at the polls.

The filing of the petition and the election on the proposal, is made possible by a law passed two years ago by the Illinois legislature, enabling municipalities under 500,000 population to vote on a tax levy not to exceed two mills for the maintenance or employment of a municipal band. The bill was made a law on June 27, 1925, on which date it was signed by Governor Small. According to persons who have gone into the matter, the small tax levy will enable this community to build and provide for a local band which will officially represent the community at patriotic celebrations such as Fourth of July, Decoration Day and Armistice Day, as well as dedications, community days, etc.

The guiding principal behind the law is that the cost of maintaining a community band is shared by all, and this way, it is hoped to build up and maintain a musical organization which the town can be proud of without placing the burden of its support on any one element in the community.

This new method of maintaining bands has received the endorsement of numerous business men and organizations throughout Illinois. By this means, a specified sum is made available for band purposes each year. Under the old method, local business men made up an annual purse for the support of the band, on the theory that

Early Grazing Is Very Injurious

Should Not Begin Until Grasses Are About Six Inches Tall.

Grazing of grasslands should not begin until most of the grasses are about six inches tall, or in the case of shorter grasses, until the stage when the flower heads are in the boot. If this practice is followed there will be less loss from poisonous plants, there will be greater production of forage, a better stand of the most palatable plants and greater carrying capacity.

Plants Are Stunted.

When grazing is started too early the desired plants are stunted and the root system remains small. When large amounts of water are needed by the leaves later in the season the roots are not deep enough to supply the demand. Sufficient food is not stored in the roots. Fewer stems and leaves are produced with a result that flowers and seeds cannot form. So the plants become weakened and reproduction is prevented.

Early in the season the soil is usually wet. Tramping at this time easily kills many plants, especially seedlings. Furthermore, many plants are readily pulled out by the roots.

Poisonous Plants Tempting.

Poisonous plants such as larkspur, locoweed and death camas begin growth early in the spring. When the grasses are still short the poisonous plants are much taller and succulent, forming a tempting bunch of green forage. The grasses at this time are low in feed value and often fail to satisfy the hunger of the stock, so a large bunch of green larkspur or other poisonous plant is greedily eaten. Later in the season the poisonous plants are not so tempting.

When the grasses are given a chance to start vigorous growth in the spring they will help prevent the spread of unpalatable and poisonous plants.—Herbert C. Hanson, Botanical Section, Colorado Experiment Station.

Sunshine and Fresh Air Important to the Calf

On many farms the calf pen is located on the north side of the building, where sunshine is an unknown quantity. In many cases the calves do not have access to outside lots where they get the benefits of sunshine. Sunshine is not only one of the best disinfecting agencies, but it is also necessary for the proper growth and development.

Fresh air is not possible where the calf pens are filled with manure. Too many pens keep adding straw to the manure which is in the calf pens without cleaning. They claim that this practice makes a warm bed. However, such a bed not only gives off heat but it also is a bed for the formation of disease germs of various kinds, as well as ammonia and carbon dioxide gases. There is little benefit from such a bed, and the chances for trouble are increased.

Only Safe Seed Bargain Is From Reliable Firm

The only safe seed bargain is the purchase from thoroughly reliable firms. You usually pay the regular price instead of the bargain price. But good seeds are always a bargain at the regular price.

In planting seed of unknown value, one stands the chance of losing two or three weeks of valuable planting time. Planting seed in liberal quantities is economical. If your garden seeds come up too thick, it is much easier to thin than to replant for good results.

Choose for the most part those varieties that have proven valuable in the past, but it is well to experiment with new varieties when you are not depending on the result.

Rich, Deep, Mellow Soil Is Proper for Parsnips

Parsnips delight in a rich, deep, mellow soil in order that the roots may grow long and straight. Undesirable side roots result when hard soil is reached. For this reason the soil must be plowed or spaded to a depth of 12 to 15 inches and a liberal dressing of fine, well-rotted manure worked into it. Fresh manure tends to cause sprawling, ill-shaped roots and should not be used. Ground that was heavily fertilized the past season is best for growing good parsnips but if only well-rotted fertilizer is used, good results may be expected.

The hollow crown is one of the best standard varieties and has proved good after tests covering several seasons.

Farm Hints

The well-fed, well-housed hen certainly knows her eggs.

Now is the time to kill the scale with the highfalutin' name of San Jose.

Sweet clover or alfalfa seed should be seeded the same year it is scarified. If it is not seeded then it will deteriorate.

Scarification of alfalfa or sweet clover seed allows moisture to enter the hard seed coat and make germination possible.

Lesson for March 20

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE

LESSON TEXT—John 14:1-3; II Cor. 5:1-10; I John 3:2, 3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Heavenly Home.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Christ Preparing a Home for Christians.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Our Heavenly Home.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Beauty and Power of the Christian's Hope.

I. Assurance of a Heavenly Home (Jno. 14:1-3).

The announcement concerning the death of Christ, accompanied with the shaping of events which pointed to a speedy accomplishment of the same, shattered the disciples' hope. The Lord told them that He was going away and that they could not follow Him. This brought great grief to their hearts. They perhaps began to doubt His Messiahship, but He did not leave them comfortless.

1. He asked them to believe and trust in Himself as God (v. 1).

"Ye believe in God, believe also in me." Faith in the God-man, Christ Jesus, will steady the heart, no matter how great the sorrow or intense the grief. If we will but place the cares and burdens of life upon Him our tears shall be turned into joy and our despondency transformed into a radiant hope.

2. He assured them that He was going to prepare a place for them in His Father's house (v. 2). He assured them that that place would have an abundance of room, for there were "many mansions" in His Father's house. We should learn from this that heaven is not an imaginary place. It is a prepared place for a prepared people.

3. He assured them that He would come again and escort them to heaven (v. 3).

Jesus will not wait for His own to come to Him, but will personally come back to the earth and call forth from the graves those who have died in the faith (I Thess. 4:16, 17), and transform living believers and take them all to be with Himself in the heavenly home for evermore. When He said, "I will come again," He no doubt meant His personal, bodily and literal return to this earth.

II. Assurance of the Resurrection of the Body (II Cor. 5:1-10). That which moved Paul for his conflict even when physical death threatened was the assurance that even such violence would but hasten his presence with the Lord. As he faced the uncertain future he was sure:

1. That his present body was only a tabernacle, a tent in which he lived temporarily (v. 1). Though this tent were destroyed he had nothing to fear, as there was a building to take its place. This house which is to take the place of the tent is

(1) From God.
(2) Not made with hands.
(3) It is eternal.

Our natural body at best crumbles to dust in about three score and ten years, but the resurrection body shall abide forever.

(4) It is to be "in the heavens."

2. He earnestly longed for the change (vv. 2-4). The human personality instinctively shrinks from a state of disembodiment, but the intelligent Christian earnestly longs for the exchange of the natural body for the spiritual. We long to put off the perishable and take on the imperishable.

3. This plan was wrought by God (v. 5).

God did not fashion the body for death, but for life. God is not the God of the dead but of the living.

4. Believers should be of good courage (vv. 6-8).

While we live in this body we are absent from the Lord, but because of the Holy Spirit dwelling within us, we confidently walk by faith, being more anxious to be absent from the body and present with the Lord.

5. The believer's chief concern in this life should be to please the Lord (vv. 9, 10).

Nothing matters—health, sickness, strength, weakness, fame or obscurity, friends or loneliness—provided at the end of the journey we hear the Lord's "well done, good and faithful servant."

III. Glorified With the Lord (I Jno. 2:2, 3).

We are now God's children, but the change which awaits the resurrection has not come yet. When it comes it will reveal our wonderful future. When the Son of God shall be manifest we shall be like Him in glory. When Christ shall come again the saints shall share His glory. This glorious hope will transform the life. The one who has it will keep himself pure even as He is pure.

If love is the greatest thing in the world, then hate is the greatest evil, for hate is the opposite of love. Love attracts, hate repels. Love is life, hate is death. Hate is the worst waste that can enter a human soul.—George Mathew Adams.

INVITING DISHES

For those who cannot eat meat often a main dish is a problem which needs thought, as it must contain nourishment and at the same time be attractive enough to appeal to the taste.

Carrots With Rice.—Scrape and cut into thick slices a dozen small carrots, cook them tender in a seasoned stock to cover. Prepare a white sauce and place the carrots with cooked rice in alternate layers with the white sauce, season well, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Noodles With Peppers.—Those who like the flavor of the green pepper will enjoy this dish: Cook sufficient noodles to serve the family; when tender drain and add a small can of pimientos, the canned red peppers, add a cupful of stock or gravy, salt and pepper and a tablespoonful of butter. Simmer together for ten minutes and serve hot.

Spanish Rice.—Chop one small onion fine, add one chopped green pepper and cook ten minutes in two tablespoonfuls of oil. Add four sliced tomatoes and one-half cupful of hot water. Cook to the boiling point, then add a cupful of rice. Cook slowly one hour, adding more water if needed to keep it moist. The rice should be previously cooked before adding to this dish.

Curried Cauliflower.—Boil a firm white head of cauliflower in salted water; when tender, drain and pour over it the following: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add a tablespoonful of chopped onion, two teaspoonfuls of flour and one of curry powder, a teaspoonful of chopped apple; cook all together, then add one cupful each of water and milk with salt to season, pour over the cauliflower and serve at once.

Cottage Cheese Soup.—Take a pint of milk, a tablespoonful of butter, the same of flour cooked together, half a teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste and a half cupful of cheese. Add onion juice to season if liked. Melt the butter, add flour and cook, then add the milk and cheese.

For the Housekeeper.—One of the joys in the household which is wearing deeper and deeper is the monotony in menu making. The same old thing in the same old way is repeated until appetite and interest in food are gone.

The housekeeper in most homes is mother, cook, nurse, seamstress and general manager; this is a man-sized job and only when she treats it as a business and brings system into its management, does she make a success, providing her health and strength hold out. Try keeping a tabulated list of the dishes liked by the family, adding to them in various ways, to avoid repetition.

Take rice for example; make a list of ten or more ways of serving rice as a main dish, as vegetable, as a dessert, or in combination with other foods. Prepare these dishes in turn and it will not be necessary to serve them often.

When whole wheat right from the granary can be purchased there is no breakfast food equal to it. If there are members of the family who desire to have it ground that can be done in an ordinary coffee mill. When serving it whole it is best to soak it over night, then cook slowly on the back of the range all day. Cook enough to last for several days and serve it with top milk. This is the best possible food for children; give it to them for their supper. As it is a food that must be chewed, it is especially good for the teeth.

In baking cakes, divide the time into quarters; if the cake should bake 40 minutes, the first ten it should begin to rise; the second ten (or quarter) it should finish rising and begin to brown; the third quarter it should finish browning and shrink from the pan. The last quarter it finishes baking.

Remember to wipe the tops of milk bottles before opening them. Hands that deliver milk are often far from clean.

Lace curtains which seem hopeless may be mended by using a piece of net or lace to match and ironing it over the hole. Trim off the edges and the mended place will not be noticed.

When making pastry handle with as little moisture as possible.

Use a tray for removing dishes from the table, also use it when carrying dishes to set the table—it saves many steps.

Paste a piece of felt or velvet in the heel of each shoe, or if the back of the heel wears out first, put a piece of velvet there; it will save wear.

Keep the heels of the shoes straight, by having a lift added when needed. Rubbers worn over turned over heels will often be ruined in one walking trip.

TAFFETA HATS IN HIGH COLORS; SMART SPRING TRAVEL COATS

NEVER a fabric more beloved by those who worship the beautiful, than taffeta. When it falls under the magic of the milliner's touch, then indeed does it convey a message of enchantment.

The "just-arrived-from-Paris" taffeta hats not only radiate springtime colorings, but they are works of art in point of needlecraft and design. There's witchery in their color blends and contrasts, as they so eloquently interpret that favorite theme of the mode—"compose."

Every hat in this group is superbly colorful, showing an interworking of taffeta together with lavish embellishmore novelty. This applies to design, color and texture. It is basket weaves which are getting the applause at the present moment. These handsome coarse loose-woven worsteds are "taking the town by storm." Both solid colors and plaids are of swagger style. Especially are plaids outstanding when they interpret the black-and-white vogue, after the manner of the ultrachic model in the picture.

In tweeds, soft textures are again important. The liking is for small-patterned effects, particularly tapestry motifs in all-over design. Colors have much to do with their fascination. There are cocoa tones slightly ment which marks a new era in point of a more elaborate styling than have known for seasons past.

A bit of fine straw for the brim of the first hat helps emphasize the thought that spring is here. A galaxy of flower colorings is represented in the handmade motifs which bank the front of the lilac-hued taffeta crown.

Like children dancing around a May-pole, circlets of fine straw in most every tint of the rainbow frolic about the soft silken crown of the novel toque in the upper right corner. The taffeta for this hat gives the effect of mother-of-pearl in its shimmering nacre coloring.

The hat in the center is of siltine blue taffeta, plaited exceedingly fine. The flat flower ornament at the side is made of straw, as is the band; also the wee ripple brim.

Worked over the taffeta like a gorgeous carpet of flowers or a rich brocade is diminutive straw in exotic colors, for the hat to the lower left.

An intricate manipulation of taffeta silk cording achieves huge flower appliquing with a pinkish cast which cast a color glamor, emphasized with fur collar which carry the same spirit of harmonious blending. Grayish greens and blues appear in these tweeds with gray fur details.

Style interest for sports coats centers around pockets and belts. Artful adjustments often combine the workings of the belt with the pocket in that the narrow belt slips under tabs of the pocket, or otherwise is buttoned somewhere in connection with it.

Pockets appear in many versions, some huge patch pockets, round or square, others the new conical shaped ones with insets of contrasting material.

All-around narrow belts are fashionable as are also those which come from the sides.

The straight-line silhouette remains a favorite for the sports coat, depending on unusual pockets and belts for individuality. Raglan sleeves are very successful this season for the novelty utility coat. Quite a few of the bright plaid coats are reversible. Some expliques as trimming for the arresting model shown last in the group.

For many of the lovely chapeaux of this season taffeta in multicolors is teamed together in designs as complicated as if mosaic. Some hats are made entirely of milliners' folds, which reveal a pretty confusion of pastel shades.

Quilting and machine stitching are also very popular for the taffeta hat. Black stitching in white is very smart. Applique of taffeta or velvet on taffeta is also favored.

As the season progresses novelty sports and spring travel coats take on extremely attractive blanket coats which are made out of fringed squares or shawls have found their way among motor coats and the like.

There is a class of coats of undoubted appeal, and having the sports feeling, which are made of kasha and other lightweight woollens such as repps and twills. These depend upon unique and intricate seamings, tucks arranged usually in tiers and of graduated sizes, yokes and other fetching details, together with flat fur decorative trimmings, such as calf, pony and leopard.

The French Revolution

"THE people are in revolt?" asked the amazed King Louis XVI. And Count Mirabeau, wiser than his royal master, replied:

"Sire, this is no revolt. It is a revolution."

After the fall of the Bastille the nation had awaited further developments. Politicians wrangled, finances became more and more entangled. Queen Marie Antoinette continued to meddle with affairs of state which she did not understand, famine and misery stalked abroad, and the news of the Bastille's destruction spread through France, everywhere stirring up the masses to courage and fury. At this juncture the king, advised by his wife, made one of his costly blunders. Although his people were starving, and although more than ever before he needed the loyalty of his native soldiers, he gave a great and expensive banquet at Versailles to his foreign troops.

This was the last straw. The National Guard, led by Lafayette and preceded by a mighty mob of angry women, marched from Paris to Versailles on October 5, 1789, attacked the Versailles palace and dragged the king and his wife and son back to Paris with them. Again a wrangle of politicians. Louis had a chance to save his throne if he would consent to become a constitutional monarch, but Marie Antoinette and the advisers with which she surrounded him would not hear of such a thing. So the foolish king, by once more yielding to his wife's demands, hastened on to the doom that awaited him and his.

National Guard regiments were formed all over the country in the name of the people. In the rural districts bands of peasants settled old scores against the masters who had oppressed them by butchering whole families of aristocrats and burning and looting their castles. Noblemen, from royalty down, began fleeing from France by the hundreds, in fear for their lives.

Meantime, in Paris a body known as the assembly drew up a "Declaration of the Rights of Man," based partly on our own Declaration of Independence. Its keynote was "equality." It proclaimed the freedom of all men, the sovereignty of the nation, religious tolerance, fair laws and the abolition of aristocracy and privilege. To this declaration Louis would not subscribe. Marie Antoinette regarded its claims as insane. Louis secretly appealed to his fellow-sovereigns of Europe, and a foreign alliance was formed to invade France and reinstate the king. The royal family sought to escape over the frontier on June 20, 1791, but were caught and brought back. After this Louis consented to swear to the Constitution, and was reinstated. But he continued to plot with foreign powers.

The allies marched against France, and famine again swept the land. This double grievance maddened the people, and they took matters in their own hands. A mob sacked the Tuilleries (the king's residence in Paris), massacred the Swiss guard, who sought to defend their master, and imprisoned the royal family. Louis was suspended from office, and in November, 1792, was brought to trial. By a vote of 387 to 334 he was condemned to death. All titles had been abolished, so under the name of "Citizen Louis Capet" the unfortunate monarch was beheaded January 21, 1793. In the same year the Reign of Terror set in. Aristocrats were guillotined by scores and hundreds. Marie Antoinette was beheaded, and her son secretly put to death in prison.

While the allies were preparing to invade France, civil war, accompanied by massacres and other atrocities, broke out and weakened the already demoralized country. Another drawback to military success was that heretofore all officers of the French army had been noblemen. These had fled or been beheaded, leaving the army officerless. The republic's officers were men promoted from the ranks solely by merit. When they proved incompetent their soldiers refused to obey them, and often even shot them. Realizing that France's welfare and very existence in this crisis depended on her soldiers, the republic granted the army all sorts of privileges and made it an object of adoration.

The newly reorganized French army, in the Revolution, turned on its allied foes and in battle after battle whipped the best disciplined troops of Europe, finally splitting the alliance against France.

Marat, Danton and Robespierre were the three prime movers in the Reign of Terror. Each of the trio used the other two for his own ends, and each sought to be dictator of the stricken country. Marat, merciless and bestial, was murdered by Charlotte Corday, whose lover he had executed. Danton, kindest and most human of the three, was routed by Robespierre and beheaded. Robespierre—dandy, bloodless, incorruptible, deadly and yet visionary—became practically dictator of France. But in 1794 he in turn was deposed and guillotined.

And now, amid the chaos, confusion of wild schemes and conflicting experiments in self-government, arose a man. Perhaps the greatest the world has ever seen. Napoleon Bonaparte.

If Back Hurts Begin on Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

So Talking Is Hot Air

A physicist has calculated that if 1,000,000 persons were to talk steadily and the energy of their voices were converted into heat, they would have to talk an hour and a half to produce enough heat to make a cup of tea.

Sea Superstitions

We are indebted to the seamen of antiquity for the belief that kingfishers cast a spell upon the deep, so that calm weather prevails during the "halcyon days," about the time of the winter solstice. Old salts object to the presence of a cat on board ship, because she "carries a gale in her tail."—Exchange.

Unproductive Land

Pontine marshes form a part of the district known in Italy as the Campagna di Roma, which is situated between Rome and the coast. Efforts have been made to drain the district, but without much success, and at the present time the district is used almost exclusively as a grazing ground for cattle.

Attic for Maid Solves House Problem

© Celotek Institute, Chicago, 1926.

THE scarcity of good servants is not the only reason why American women are doing their own work and tying themselves down to cooking three meals a day. One big factor is the lack of an extra room to give a maid. High rents and building costs have brought about an era of small, compactly planned houses in most of which there is no room at all for a maid or else it means giving up a coveted guest or sewing room. Furthermore, many families would rather do without service than to give up their feeling of privacy, which having a maid in such small quarters would destroy.

Making a maid's room out of the unused attic is one satisfactory solution to the problem. At slight expense a small, attractive little room may be fixed up which would please any girl and it will be sufficiently removed from the rest of the house to assure privacy to the family and to the maid.

One would have to engage an Eskimo in the winter and a Fiji Islander in the summer to live in the wasted space between the second floor and the roof, unless it were properly and scientifically insulated. This is a simple matter for the attic of even an old house, by sealing the rafters with one or preferably two layers of cane fiber insulating lumber. Heat of course rises from the floors below and ordinarily escapes through the roof.

This heat can be conserved for warming the new room by using this insulating lumber which retards the passage of heat, and effects a substantial saving in the annual fuel bill into the bargain.

After fitting strips of the lumber on all sides where the rafters meet the floor joists, the boards are nailed to the under side of the rafters and to the side walls. This surface makes a plaster base or, equally attractive, is left untreated, simply covering the joints with molding strips.

A closet can usually be built in, depending upon the shape of the room, or shelves may be put up, covered with cretonne curtains, and fitted with hooks and rods. The cubby-holes under the eaves may also be lined with the insulating lumber and used for hanging trunks, screens or other storage articles. If a fire cannot be run from the furnace or heating plant, a small stove, or gas, oil or electric burner will supply the additional heat needed.

The furniture for such a room is of course very simple and inexpensive. A little enamel paint will do worlds to make old, chipped bedsteads and old-fashioned furniture sets look attractive. Light curtains should be used because the windows in such a room are apt to be small.

The man of the house if he is handy can extend a small wire from below with a buzzer attached for calling the maid in an emergency.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. CHAPTER VII—Continued

He took one step forward as we halted, and his right arm went up in the graceful Iroquois salute.

"Qua, Ta-wan-nears!" his voice boomed out. "You are welcome home, O my nephew. I can see that you have been brave against our enemies, for you carry a string of scalps at your belt. I can see that you have been honored, for Corlaer walks with you. I can see that you have been fortunate, for a strange white man walks beside you who has friendship in his face."

"Enter, O my nephew, with your white friends. We are eager to hear of your experiences and the deeds you have done. Enter!"

He turned on his heel and walked before us, and those who had accompanied him fell into single file behind us. So we paraded through the village—or rather I should say town, for it contained many thousand people—until we reached a house in the center where burned the tribal Council Fire and where ambassadors and distinguished guests were lodged.

The roy-an-ehs, chiefs and elders filed into it at our heels and arranged themselves around the fire in the center. Then squaws fetched in clay dishes of meats and vegetables of several kinds, as well as fruit, which they set down at intervals around the circle, and at a signal from Do-ne-ho-ga-weh everybody began to eat, each one dipping his fingers into whichever dish was nearest or most to his liking, but all governed by the utmost deference toward the wishes of their neighbors.

At the conclusion of the meal Do-ne-ho-ga-weh lighted a ceremonial pipe, carved of soapstone, with a long wooden mouthpiece decorated with beads and small, bright-colored feathers. He blew one puff toward the ground, one puff toward the sky and one toward each of the four quarters. Then he passed it to Ta-wan-nears on his right hand, and Ta-wan-nears gravely puffed it for a moment, and handed it to me. I did likewise, and gave it to Corlaer, who handed it on to the next man, and so it went the rounds of the fire.

There was a moment's silence, and then Ta-wan-nears began the account of his travels, speaking slowly and without oratorical effect. Afterward he told me what he and the others had said. He made no references to our mission, but he described his journey to New York, his interview with Ga-en-gwa-ra-go—this impressed his audience mightily, and they applauded by a succession of guttural grunts—his meeting with me; the arrival of Murray and De Veuille and its meaning; our journey homeward and the fight with the Cahnugas.

There was a pause. Then Do-ne-ho-ga-weh rose.

"We thank you, O my nephew," he said. "You have indeed honored us and yourself, and your white friends have shown themselves to be brave men. Now we will retire so that you may rest."

He walked out, and the others followed.

"What next?" I asked as Ta-wan-nears filled his pipe.

The Seneca smiled.

"Soon we shall have a real talk," he said, and reached for a live coal.

An hour passed, and I began to doubt my friend's wisdom. I was sleepy and tired. But in the event I was rewarded, for a shadow darkened the entrance and the Guardian of the Western Door stood before us.

He sat between Ta-wan-nears and me, and crammed tobacco into his pipe bowl.

"You are not sleeping, O my nephew," he commented.

"We have that upon our minds which will not let us sleep," answered Ta-wan-nears. (This conversation was translated for me later by Ta-wan-nears.)

"Would it ease the weight on your minds to confide your troubles in me?"

"That is my thought, O my uncle."

Do-ne-ho-ga-weh bowed gravely to all of us.

"My ears are open," he said.

There was a pause, and Ta-wan-nears put down his pipe upon the floor.

"As you know, O my uncle," he began, "I went with Corlaer to Ga-en-gwa-ra-go to tell him of Joncaire's plans to build a stone fort at Jagara."

On the same day came this white warrior, Ormerod, whom I call my brother, with word that Murray had defeated Ga-en-gwa-ra-go before Go-weh-go-wa.

On the same day came the Frenchman De Veuille, who once lived for a while amongst us. Him you will remember."

The bronze mask of the roy-an-eh's face was coopted for one brief instant by a flare of passion.

"I remember him," he said simply.

"De Veuille comes from Onontio's king with a message for the Canadian tribes. O my uncle. He and Murray and Joncaire work together to defeat our friend Ga-en-gwa-ra-go and drive the English from the land. Ga-en-gwa-ra-go has sent my brother Ormerod, who has lived amongst the French and speaks their tongue, to spy out the ground at Jagara. I go with him. After that, if we may, we shall seek the Doom Trail and clean out the Cahnuga dogs."

For five minutes Do-ne-ho-ga-weh smoked in silence. Then he emptied his pipe.

"I am glad that Ga-en-gwa-ra-go keeps his eyes open, O my nephew," he said. "Do you wish my counsel?"

Ta-wan-nears inclined his head. "The Messagues you met on the Mohawk told you that De Tonty was in trouble. I do not think word of this can yet have reached Joncaire. My advice is that you dress yourself as a Messague warrior, O my nephew, and that your white brother call himself by a French name. Then the two of you may go to Joncaire and say that you have just come from Le de Troit and give him the news and he will make you welcome. So you may spy out his plans at Jagara."

"Ja," assented Corlaer in English; "that is a good plan. You need a good plan for a fox like Joncaire. By—, I hope, you fool him and bring home his scalp."

"The news which Ga-en-gwa-ra-go asks for will be sufficient," replied Ta-wan-nears. "O my uncle, we thank you. Now we may sleep with ease."

"That is well," said the roy-an-eh, rising.

He lifted his arm in salute. "May Ha-wen-ne-yu, the Great Spirit, and the Ho-ne-che-no-keh, his Invisible Aids, have you in their keeping."

CHAPTER VIII

Trapped

It was a week before we left De-onun-da-ga-a, and although the delay irked me it could not be avoided, for the prolonged absence of Ta-wan-nears from his post as Warden of the Western Door of the Long House had permitted an accumulation of questions of political and military importance which required his attention. He spent the days either in consultation with the roy-an-ehs and chiefs and delegations from neighboring tribes or in inspecting the marches. Corlaer departed with a small band of braves upon a hunting trip, but I availed myself of the opportunity to gain an insight into the workings of the remarkable military confederacy which held the balance of power in America.

One of Ta-wan-nears' first acts was to organize a war party to harry the Miami in retaliation for an attack upon a village of the Andastes in the Susquehanna valley who were subject to the jurisdiction of the League.

"It was the intent of the Founders to prevent quarrels amongst the five nations who formed the Ho-de-no-sau-nee," explained Ta-wan-nears. "Before we built the Long House we fought constantly amongst ourselves. Afterward we fought only against others, and because we were united we always won, although sometimes our wars lasted for many years."

"And now that we are strong, and only white man can venture to oppose our war parties, we fight for nothing more than the right to impose peace upon others. If a nation makes trouble for us too frequently we subjugate it, as we did the Delawares. If a nation is in difficulties, as were the Tuscaroras in the south, and they appeal to us for aid, we give it. We took the Tuscaroras into the League because that was the best way we could protect them."

"Against whom?" I asked innocently.

"Against the white man," he answered. "Aye, brother, down in the southern colonies the white men hunger for land just as they do here in New York. When an Indian tribe is weak, as were the Tuscaroras, the white men drive it before them. When a tribe is strong, like the O-ya-da-ga-

Thoreau's Tribute to Wonders of Nature

Nature has taken more care than the fondest parent for the education and refinement of her children. Consider the silent influence which flowers exert, no less upon the ditcher in the meadow than the lady in the bower.

When I walk in the woods I am reminded that a wise purveyor has been there before me; my most delicate experience is typified there. I am struck with the pleasing friendships and unanimities of nature, as when the lichen on the trees takes the form of their leaves. In the most stupendous scenes you will see delicate and fragrant features, as slight wreaths of vapor, dewlines, feathery sprays, which suggest a high refinement, a noble breeding, as it were. Bring a spray from the wood, or a crystal

o-no (Cherokees) or ourselves, it can resist—for a time."

He fell silent and his eyes gazed moodily into the smoke of the council fire.

"Why do you say 'for a time'?" I asked.

"Because I mean it," he retorted fiercely. "Today the Indian is still strong. He has the protection of the forest. The white man foolishly has given him guns to fight with, and steel axes and knives. But the Indian grows weaker; the white man grows stronger. In the end the Indian must go."

He leaned forward until his face was close to mine.

"When all else fails the white man will use fire-water, what you call rum and the French call brandy. The red man cannot resist it—and it ruins him. He becomes a red animal."

"But—"

He would not let me speak.

"And your missionaries told me I must believe in their God!" he went on scornfully. "A God who permits white men to do things the God of the Indians forbids! I said to them:

"No. I am an Indian. A good Indian is better than a good white man; he is a better Christian, as you call it. And between bad Indians and bad white men there is only a difference in kinds of evil."

The next day we started upon the march to Jagara. We had not gone very far on the morning of the second day of our journey when I began to hear what sounded like a muffled roar, not thunder, but the howling of some gigantic monster, whose breath could rattle the trees of the forest. Ta-wan-nears smiled at my obvious bewilderment.

"Tis the voice of the Great Falls, brother," he said. "The Thunder Waters."

"Does water make that noise?" I exclaimed.

"Nothing but water."

"Tis impossible."

"So many have said; and, indeed, the missionaries told me 'twas one of the greatest wonders of the world."

In the early afternoon a mist appeared, overhanging the treetops on the horizon and shot with gorgeous rainbows. The volume of noise increased. When we stepped from the trees and the panorama of the cataract lay before us, a vast, seething wall of water that swirled and smoked and tossed and fumed in an endless fight for freedom, I was amazed, staggered by the magnitude of the spectacle.

I stumbled behind Ta-wan-nears into the trail of the portage which led around the falls. Canoes and goods were transported by this route from the Cadarakul lake to the Lake of the Eries whence poured this endless stream; it was a main-traveled road between the French posts in Canada and their outlying establishments in the farther wilderness.

We followed it northeastward until twilight, the roar of the falls gradually diminishing behind us, and came at length into an open space upon the banks of the swift-running river which carried the shattered waters into the Cadarakul lake. Close to the bank stood a flagstaff, and from its summit floated the white ensign of France.

At the foot of this staff, as if resting secure under the folds of the flag, rose the walls of a substantial log house. Behind it was a collection of smaller huts and lodges of bark.

A large, stout man, with very greasy, lanky black hair, hailed us from the log house as we approached.

"Holla!" he shouted in French. "Who comes so free from the westward without canoe or fur-packs?"

"A poor, miserable rascal of a forest-runner," I called back gayly.

"And who might this 'poor, miserable rascal of a forest-runner' be?" he demanded. "These are the king's grounds, and we must know who comes and goes."

"Mon Dieu!" I appealed in mock consternation to the stars. "But it is a hard man to deal with! Will you have an objection, monsieur, to the name of Jean Courbevoir?"

"None in the world, Jean," he returned promptly, "if you have your trading permit with you. But who is the good savage with you?"

Nobody had told me anything of a trading permit, and I fought for time. "You call him good with justice, monsieur—By the way, what is your name?"

"They call me Joncaire," he said with a trace of grimness.

"Joncaire! Mort de ma vie! The very man I have been searching for!"

"What? How is that?" he asked.

"Ah, but that is a tale! I cannot believe it now! Am I in very truth on French soil once more?"

"This is the Magazin Royal," he returned. "As for French soil, mon brave, I do not see how you could have been off it."

Around Orchard

SAY ORCHARDISTS PRUNE TOO MUCH

Horticulturists at the experiment station at Geneva, N. Y., assert that many orchardists prune too much, without regard to the real need of the tree and that there is more danger of injuring the tree with too much pruning than with too little.

Trees which are carefully selected when the orchard is set out require only the removal of an occasional branch which may start out in the wrong place and the cutting out of dead, injured, and crossed limbs, say the station specialists.

If the trees are producing undersized fruits, if the tops contain many dead branches, or if the seasonal growth is short and scant, judicious pruning is recommended as a means of rejuvenation. "This usually consists in cutting back many branches and in entirely removing others," say the station authorities, who lay down the following general rules applicable under such conditions. "Prune weak-growing varieties heavily; strong-growing kinds lightly. Varieties which branch freely need little pruning; those with many unbranched limbs, much pruning. Prune trees in rich, deep soils lightly; in poor, shallow soils, heavily."

The cutting back of all the branches of a tree is practiced regularly only with peaches and some plums, it is said. "This is attributed to the fact that, with these fruits, the wood of the past season, and therefore the crop, is borne progressively further away from the trunk, so that it is necessary to head-in these fruits by cutting back the branches in order to keep the bearing wood near the trunk. On the other hand, apples, pears, cherries and most plums are borne on spurs from wood two or more years old and with these heading-in is not so desirable. Experimental evidence obtained in tests on the station grounds indicates that winter pruning has no special advantage over summer pruning, except that the pressure of other work is less during the winter months."

Geraniol, New Attractor for Japanese Beetle

The new attractive agent, geraniol, developed by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture as an aid in its control work against the Japanese beetle, has been found very successful. Methods have been worked out whereby this material may be used to concentrate the beetles in a relatively small area. It was found that by spraying less than an acre of orchard with geraniol, beetles could be drawn on the leeward side of the orchard for a distance of nearly one-half mile within the first 15 minutes after the spray had been applied. This makes it possible to destroy large numbers of beetles with a comparatively small quantity of a contact spray. Further work has been done on traps baited with geraniol, but although these capture large numbers of beetles, it is not felt that a trap has been developed which can be recommended for general use.

Increased efforts were made last summer to develop a repellent which could be used on fruit trees without leaving a deposit on the foliage or fruit. It was found that certain odors, particularly the odor of tar, are distinctly repellent to the Japanese beetle, and these will be studied further.

New Fruit Varieties Are Described in a Bulletin

Thirty-two new improved fruits produced by horticulturists of the University of Minnesota at the state fruit breeding farm are described and most of them pictured in Bulletin 230 prepared by W. H. Alderman, chief of the division of horticulture, and issued by the Minnesota experiment station. These varieties, which have been given names and introduced among fruit growers, include 14 kinds of plums, three plum-cherry hybrids, four apples, seven strawberries, one red raspberry, one gooseberry, and two ornamentals.

"Many of these varieties are rapidly becoming accepted as standards in this and adjoining states, and the plums are being planted on a commercial scale," says the bulletin. "The wealth accruing to the state each year from the products of these 32 varieties far exceeds the total cost of all the state-supported fruit breeding experiments since the establishment of the first fruit breeding farm in 1878."

This bulletin is for free distribution and copies can be obtained by writing the Office of Publications at University Farm, St. Paul.

Keep an Account

Every progressive farmer should keep an account of his farm business if he is to know at the end of the year whether he has made a profit or loss, after paying all farm expenses; also to help him study his business and make such changes in his organization and operation as are important from the standpoint of increasing his profits. Farmers interested in keeping such a record this coming year, can get both information and help from his agricultural college.
